MEMORANDUM FOR RECORD

On 25 February 1948 I talked with [redacted] in regard to her refusal to work as scheduled on the midnight shift beginning 26 February. She said that although she was anxious to cooperate and not cause anyone trouble, she did not understand why she could not remain on day shift for one more month, as originally scheduled before [redacted] transfer. She had given Personnel to understand that they had that period in which to locate her another job.

I told her that since she had already been granted one month of day shift beyond that due her by normal rotation, the effect on morale of asking another teletypist to do double night duty for her benefit, regardless of whether it was understood that she was about to leave, would be too bad for us to permit it; and that if she could not report to the midnight shift it would be necessary for her to go on leave until transferred. She agreed to do so.

I told her also that after further consideration we thought it best not to renew the offer to her of trying out as chief of the typist section; it was a difficult and hazardous job, and we thought she could find something better suited to her. I advised her personally to accept the CAF-5 position, with day and evening work, offered her in CIA Signals Center.

She said that [redacted] had advised her not to accept this position, since a fully day job could be found for her. I suggested that she consult [redacted] again right away in this regard, since Colonel White had just brought [redacted] up to date on her situation.
